Sizzlin' Greens is shaking up the fast-casual scene with scratch-made meals, and a warm, welcoming vibe

SIZZLIN' SCENE

In a city bursting with fast-casual chains churning out cookie-cutter meals, Sizzlin' Greens is going against the grain—and Winter Garden is taking notice. Just 12 months after opening in April 2024, this family-run gem was named best new business by Winter Garden Rants, Raves and Reviews, and for good reason.

Forget limp salads and lifeless bowls. At Sizzlin' Greens, organic greens, grass-fed burgers, freshly grilled proteins, and scratch-made soups come together in a menu that's as indulgent as it is clean. No seed oils. No shortcuts. Just good food, obsessively sourced and prepared with care.

At the heart of it all is the Holden family—Ray, Ryan, Stephen, Jason, and Kyle—who've poured their passion into every detail. Ray Holden, a longtime Miller's Ale House executive, spent three decades in the industry before deciding it was time for something different. Inspired by his wife Jackie, a holistic health practitioner, he set out to create a restaurant that married clean eating with bold flavor.

"My wife's all about healthy living, and I'm all about comfort food with big flavor," Ray says. "So we brought them together—no compromise." The result? A menu brimming with organic produce, grass-fed burgers, antibiotic-free chicken, and scratch-made soups—without a single drop of seed oil in sight.

"No seed oils," Ray emphasizes. "Everything is made from scratch." That commitment to clean eating extends to every corner of the menu, from the signature salads to the wildly popular Build-a-Plate option, which allows diners to mix and match proteins and sides to suit their cravings. "We've expanded to seven protein options and up to ten fresh sides," Ray says. "It's taken off at dinner, but even at lunch, people love having a healthier, customizable option."

But Ray's real passion? The bread. A sandwich lover from Long Island, he spent months sourcing the perfect baguette—a crusty-yet-soft beauty par-baked in Tribeca and finished in-house daily. The result is a sandwich lineup that's turning heads: a chimichurri steak masterpiece, a sausage-and-pepper creation that pays homage to his roots, and so much more.

"We don't use fryers or microwaves. Everything's cooked to order in our open kitchen," says Ryan. Even the environment defies the fast-casual norm—imported terrazzo floors, real silverware, and a vibe that's more boutique café than assembly-line chain.

The real surprise? The evening scene. Happy hour has transformed Sizzlin' Greens into a laid-back local hangout with half-priced organic wines during happy hour, Crooked Can brews, and plenty of non-salad options. "You can come for the best burger in town or a clean protein plate, sip a glass of wine, and relax," Ray says. "Where else in fast-casual can you do that?"

And just in case you thought Sizzlin' Greens was only for dine-in purists, their catering game is just as strong. The Build-a-Plate concept translates seamlessly into a crowd-pleasing buffet-style spread, making it a go-to for events and office lunches.

In a market crowded with Realtors, Shelley Dawson stands apart. Let her be the Compass that guides your way home.

Why would Shelley Dawson—a Realtor who consistently ranks among the top 200 agents in Central Florida out of more than 20,000—choose to make a move when her business was already thriving? Because standing still isn't an option.

"As we head into 2026, I wanted to be even better equipped for my clients," Shelley says. "Not just with experience, but with the strongest possible platform behind me. I'm always looking for ways to raise the standard of service I provide. Because my clients deserve that."

That mindset is what led her to Compass, a modern real estate brokerage built for today's market, combining top-tier agents with powerful technology and an intentional marketing approach.

For Shelley, joining Compass was about strengthening the business she's built and expanding what she can deliver. "Compass has a high bar for entry," she explains. "Agents are invited based on performance and experience. Becoming part of Compass felt like a milestone. But more importantly, it aligned with the level I expect of myself."

Shelley's clients will continue to receive the personal attention, discretion, and hands-on guidance she's known for, but with added advantages designed to support stronger results and a more seamless experience. Compass's systems are designed to work intuitively, using AI-driven tools behind the scenes to streamline the process, surface real-time insights, and keep clients informed without overwhelming them.

Exclusive Advantages

One of the most compelling advantages is access to listings not publicly marketed and visible only within the Compass network, called Compass Private Exclusives. This gives buyers access to opportunities others may never see, and it allows sellers to introduce their property in a more controlled, strategic way.

Phase One: Private Exclusive. A discreet introduction that builds early demand and allows pricing to be refined before going public.

Phase Two: Coming Soon. A pre-market phase that builds anticipation through intentional exposure.

Phase Three: Public Launch. A professionally executed debut across major platforms, supported by curated marketing and strategic positioning.

"I'm still the same Realtor I've always been," Shelley says. "Same personal touch, same high stan-
